The event brought together CILT logistics and transport professionals from all over Africa to share their experiences in the logistics and transport industry. They also highlighted the institutes successes and challenges.

The Forum discussed many issues facing the different CILT sections throughout Africa. The future of CILT in Africa was also examined. Dr David Maunder, Director of Professional Development for CILT International, maintained that "African sections are now sustainable and good transport systems will enable all countries to grow their economies." Dr. Barbara Jensen, responsible for communication and marketing of Gautrain gave a presentation at the CILT International Africa Forum that was held in February.

Delegates were updated on the progress of the construction of Gautrain, Africa’s largest Public Private Partnership (PPP).

Barbara outlined the entire construction and future plans of the train, which will partly run underground. The Gautrain bus system will exist outside all stations, providing commuters with an ideal method of transport. The system will further be integrated with the Bus Rapid Transport (BRT) systems of Johannesburg and Tshwane. The BRT has been described as a “high quality, customer oriented transport system which will deliver fast, comfortable, and low cost urban mobility”.

It involves the construction of “bus way corridors” on segregated lanes. These buses will operate in conjunction with the Gautrain, with 36 feeder and distribution systems. For further convenience park and ride facilities will exist at all the Gautrain Stations.

Air Cargo and Express Freight is on the Up and Up!

“The freight industry is ever-changing. Shifts in consumer buying patterns, inconsistent economic factors – soaring fuel prices and tariffs, time constraints, e-freight processes and the increasing skills shortage continue to impact every level of the supply chain. All industry stakeholders need to be well-informed of current trends, innovations and developments if they intend to keep their fingers on the pulse and stay ahead in the freight-game”, says Catherine Larkin, Executive Director of the Chartered Institute of Logistics & Transport (CILTSA) and organiser of the Institute’s second International Air Cargo and Express Freight Conference. The conference will be held on 7 and 8 May at Birchwood Executive Hotel & Conference Centre.

“Stakeholders need to keep their businesses on the up and up – with informed decisions, competitive processes and well-oiled supply chains”, remarks Catherine.

CILTSA, in association with SAAFF (The South African Association of Freight Forwarders) presents the second international air cargo and express freight conference. The conference’s theme is “Air Cargo and Express Freight is on the up and up”. The exciting and informative programme includes keynote presentations by both local and internationally-acclaimed industry experts.

Topics that will be covered include:

- Trends and Strategies of the Global Air Cargo Market
- Air Cargo Security
- Analysis of Strategic Alliances as a Source of Competitive Advantage in the Air Cargo Industry
- Getting “Freight-Ready” for 2010 FIFA Soccer World Cup
- BBBEE in the Transport Industry

CILT International Management Committee Meeting in South Africa

Steve Agg CEO of CILT UK with Catherine Larkin of CILTSA

“Packaging is an essential part of any supply chain – often misunderstood and unloved but necessary”, says Andrew Marthinusen, Executive Director of PACSA (Packaging Council of South Africa) and a speaker at the Chartered Institute of Logistics and Transport’s (CILTSA) inaugural “How Green is your Supply Chain?” Conference. The event will take place at Glenburn Lodge, Muldersdrift on 28 August.

According to a recent report, the packaging industry in South Africa is worth some R29 billion per annum. “Packaging protects, preserves, informs, attracts, creates economic options and enables our businesses to communicate with its consumers. It’s the disposal thereof that needs to be managed correctly”, remarks Andrew.

Andrew goes on to say that, “Environmentalists need to work hand-in-hand with industry decision-makers and focus on achieving both economically viable and sustainable packaging goals”.

CILTSA in association with the Consumer Goods Council of South Africa (CGCSA) presents the “How Green is your Supply Chain?” Conference to be held on 28 August at Glenburn Lodge, Muldersdrift. “I’m glad to be involved in an event of this nature,” says Andrew. “The impact of our business operations on the environment needs to be addressed urgently and a gathering of this sort provides a medium in which to do this”, says Andrew.

Delegates from CILT Hong Kong and CILT Malaysia also attended the meeting.

Andrew Marthinusen, Executive Director of PACSA (Packaging Council of South Africa) and keynote speaker at CILTSA’s “How Green is your Supply Chain?” Conference on the 28 August 2008.

Leading Training Institutions receives International Accreditation

Global Trade Training (GTT), in partnership with Professional Aviation Services, is very proud to announce that they have received accreditation from CILT International to offer the industry an International Certificate in Logistics and Transport.

“We are the first South African institution to have received this accreditation,” says Charles Dey, GTT’s CEO.

The Chartered Institute of Logistics and Transport (CILT) is a worldwide organisation with an established International pedigree. With over 30,000 members in 30 countries, CILT spans the globe. It is an organisation that offers a complete suite of educational courses internationally. The International Certificate is the foundation course (pitched roughly at the South African National Qualifications Framework Level 4). “In the future we will also be offering the Advanced Certificate and Diploma courses,” says Charles.

As far as the Certificate is concerned, learners will benefit from a comprehensive understanding and overview of key areas in logistics and transport. It is an excellent introductory qualification for new entrants into the logistics and transport sector.

Adds Charles “One of the features which excited the CILT accreditation delegation is that this training will be offered on a blended learning basis which combines the best of both e-learning and contact training.”

How will industry members be able to claim for this training from TETA?

A problem with many overseas qualifications is that, since they are not aligned to South African unit standards and qualifications, they cannot be registered as learnerships and therefore they are not eligible for Transport Education Training Authority (TETA) Discretionary Grant funding.

Last year GTT’s senior management participated in a South African Qualification Authority (SAQA) sponsored unit standards writing and qualifications building exercise aimed at creating a series of transport qualifications which are aligned to the CILT qualifications.

Once the South African qualifications are registered the necessary steps will be taken to have them registered as learnerships by TETA with the Department of Labour.

South African learners who successfully complete the NQF 4 learnerships through TETA accredited providers will then need to write the CILT examinations through GTT (they are set locally and moderated by CILT in the UK) in order to obtain the international qualification.

In this way industry members (and their employees) obtain the best of both worlds TETA funding for an international qualification.
